Welcome to this five week course on Differentiating for Learning. We've designed a range of activities, and some pre and post session ones as well, with the aim of helping you engage with our current understanding experience of Differentiating for Learning. So that you can develop your ideas and practise.

We've designed the course to be flexible and included a range of activities to influence and challenge your thinking. And provide examples demonstrating a range of classrooms. We'd also encourage you to try some of the ideas in your own classroom. And then take the opportunity to engage in online discussion with others.

Before the course gets properly underway, we'd like you to introduce yourself and to describe the kind of educational establishment you teach in. The main subject and the age range that you teach, your previous experience of Differentiating for Learning, and what you hope to get out of the course. Chris and I very much hope that this course proves to be useful and enjoyable, and that overall it helps you get to grips with Differentiating for Learning.
