

Assessment for learning in STEM teaching

Welcome To The Course

Welcome to the six-week course on Assessment for Learning. We've designed a range of activities and some pre- and post-session ones as well. The aim is to help you engage with current understanding and experience of Assessment for Learning and move your ideas forward.

We've designed the course to be flexible and that includes quizzes and tests to help you decide appropriate starting points. We'd also encourage you to try out some of the ideas in your own classroom and then take the opportunity to engage in online discussion with others.

Before the course gets properly underway, we'd like you to introduce yourself and to describe the kind of educational establishment you teach in, the main subject and the age range that you teach, your previous experience of Assessment for Learning, and what you hope to get out of the course.

Chris and I very much hope that this course proves to be useful and enjoyable and that overall it helps you get fully to grips with Assessment for Learning.
